

Website Resource Submission Request

Date Submitted: _____

Resource Title: _____

Author: _____

Date of Publication: _____ Where Published: _____

Short Abstract of the resource:

Explain why you feel this is an important resource:

Link to Resource on Web: _____

Or

Attach copy of Resource in .pdf format

Note: if providing a copy to post on the Cogence web-site the Author must explicitly give Cogence authorization to post the resource on the Cogence web-site. This authorization can be provided in the form of an e-mail from the Author, or a signed document in .pdf format.

Contributed by: _____ Company: _____ Date Accepted: _____

Please submit completed submission to resource@cogence.org

Example:

No-Surprise Construction

In 2004 Ava Abramowitz wrote an article for The Construction Lawyer called “Implementing New Contracting Relationships to Create Successful Projects for all Parties in the Construction Process” for a publication of the ABA’s Forum on Construction Law. The article is a call for a change in the way the industry approaches construction contracting, an approach she termed “No Surprise Construction”. This resonated deeply with our team at Cleveland Clinic as we were discussing our approach to design and construction of our major projects. Many of the ideas in the original article were foundational to the transformation of our delivery system into what we call OCTPDSM, Owner Controlled Team Project Delivery. “Want to Keep A Project On Track? Get Real” is to an updated version of the original article. I find the message as relevant for today as it was 12 years ago, and believe it strongly support collaborative project delivery.

Want to Keep A Project On Track? Get Real

Ava J. Abramowitz, Esq.

http://www.americanbar.org/content/dam/aba/administrative/construction_industry/forums/Workshop%20A-Paper%202016%20Annual%20Meeting.authcheckdam.pdf

Contributed by Pen Wolf, Cleveland Clinic